

Located within La Paillade, this project operates at the architectural scale, translating broader urban guidelines into a detailed intervention. It advances renovation and densification through vertical and horizontal extensions and coherent new construction, while strengthening connections between private housing and communal infrastructure, notably the library. Ground floors are reactivated with commercial, civic, and productive uses, including offices and workshops. Particular attention is given to climatic adaptation and coherence with the Mediterranean context through the integration of native vegetation, shaded public spaces, and strategies for temperature regulation. Interconnected indoor and outdoor public spaces foster social interaction, while new housing units enable the careful densification of the sub-district.
